ABOUT US

Ramsey and Anita Russell, Owners

Ramsey Russell's creed is "Life's short get ducks." A certified wildlife biologist by training, he's also a lifelong wingshooter. After over two decades of delivering outstanding services to the global hunting community through GetDucks.com, Ramsey is recognized as the foremost authority in worldwide duck hunting destinations. Ramsey is from Brandon, Mississippi, subchairs SCI's Gamebird of the World, and specializes in finding the right waterfowl hunting properties as a Land Professional at National Land Realty. His work and dedication have taken him to the world's best waterfowl hunting areas. Although a worldwide hunter and guide, his favorite times are spent at home in Mississippi hunting with his family, close friends, and favorite retrievers.

Ramsey and Anita have been married since 1994. Together they form the perfect partnership in life and work. Ramsey's training and experiences are essential to building the best collection of quality duck hunting experiences in the world; Anita's attention to detail, planning, and communication are integral to success. GetDucks.com is a home-grown, family-operated, indie business - experienced enough to take care of you expertly, small enough to always treat you personally. Recognizing the personal nature of hunting trips, Ramsey and Anita make themselves available to assist before, during, and after hunt travel.

After I book a hunt with GetDucks.com I relax knowing that all the arrangements will be taken care of. Anita takes extremely good care of all my needs, she's the very best. I like the fact that if I am interested in a particular hunt all I have to do is call Ramsey knowing that he has been there personally and will give me a straight answer as to what I can expect on any given hunt. - Dan Spencer

THE BEST ARGENTINA DUCK HUNTS

Experience Real Argentina. Authentic experiences, hot barrels, heaviest straps, excellent value. Proven packages for ducks, more ducks, or combo hunts. Real hunts for real hunters. As genuine American duck hunters, we know.

Argentina Duck Hunting - Options for high-quality duck hunting throughout Argentina include special package rates and customized packages available only through GetDucks.com. For serious wingshooters, vacationing families, hunters checking off species, whether first-timers or every-timers – GetDucks.com has your Argentina duck hunting covered. Duck species include: Rosy-billed Pochard, White-faced Whistling Duck, Fulvous Whistling Duck, Black-bellied Whistling Duck, Brazilian Duck, South American Knob-billed Duck, Yellow-billed Pintail, White-cheeked Pintail, Speckled Teal, Cinnamon Teal, Ringed Teal, Silver Teal, Red Shoveler, Chiloe Wigeon, and more. Mid-April through August.

Remote Parana River Delta Duck Hunt - Destined to become absolute legend among our destinations, this is an immersive adventure in what remains one of the wildest and most remote places you've likely ever set foot, especially in Argentina. And yet, its relative convenience is surprising. From a 5-stateroom floating lodge located 20-plus miles from the nearest road whatsoever, you're never more than 15 minutes from 2-hunter blinds in one of the most pristine hunting environments imaginable. Gourmet, chef-prepared meals, top-shelf wine selections and wifi while hunting truly wild birds in a remarkably wild place makes this experience stand head and shoulders above the rest. Reserve exclusively with as few as 4 hunters.

GetDucks.com Parana River

La Paz Wingshooting Combo - Enjoy a full-on combo for ducks, doves, decoying pigeons, perdiz and optional dorado fishing. Vast property holdings, world-class shooting. This long-time client favorite offers the perfect sampling of Argentina from a single great location, fun family atmosphere with nearby non-hunting activities, too. Highly interpersonal guest services, some of the very best meals in Argentina. We never stack guests to the rafters. Enjoy the week exclusively among yourselves with as few as 4 hunting guests.

GetDucks.com La Paz

Argentina Dove and Pigeon Combo

Located in San Luis Province, guests enjoy combo high-volume dove hunting and decoying pigeons. Excellent meals and accommodations, morning and afternoon shoots with field lunches. Hunts located about an 1-1.5 hours from lodge.

"Your expectations as you head out each morning are often surpassed by the days results. When your hunt ends and limits fulfilled you always come away amazed at the number of birds you witnessed that day. You return to your cabana exhausted and fulfilled ready for a hot shower. It's then followed by a fine meal and local Malbec, a fine cigar, and buddy time." - B. Hanson

"Our Argentina duck hunt was great. Los Ceibos was a great destination, the guides and lodge were first class and the hunting (for ducks, doves and perdiz) was better than expected. Thanks Ramsey!" - Robert Hammonds

Las Flores Duck Hunt - Fast-paced duck shooting convenient to Buenos Aires. Nobody but nobody delivers in-your-face rosy-bill shooting like this operator. Regardless of weather and water, liberal limits are the rule, never the exception. A true hunter himself, he has delivered liberal limits daily for decades. Hunts are conducted withing 25 minutes of lodge, in blinds accessible to hunters of all ages. Our top Argentina duck hunt for good reason.

GetDucks.com Las Flores

Los Ceibos Combo - Enjoy daily combinations of excellent hunting for ducks, doves or perdiz just a few hours easy drive time from EZE. And leave the waders at home if you prefer, not needed to bag generous duck limits here. Very easy hunting conditions, non-hunting guests activities nearby.

"Duck hunting combo in Argentina at GetDucks.com's La Paz Lodge was incredible!! Duck hunting was a blast! On the last day of dove hunting we broke the lodge ALL TIME RECORD for the most doves killed in a single afternoon (4,553) UNBELIEVABLE!! All staff are world class!!" - W. K. & Friends

ULTIMATE SOUTH AFRICA WINGSHOOTING

South Africa Duck Hunting Combo is an incredible adventure that rivals Mexico and Argentina in terms of volume, but is an excellent collection duck hunt, too. Yes! Trophy bird capes may be imported to United States for taxidermy! Our customized GetDucks South Africa duck hunting packages encompass multiple provinces to ensure widest possible variety of habitats, maximizing the variety of ducks, geese, and upland gamebird species possible. For serious duck hunters, experienced collectors or vacationing families seeking to experience real South Africa duck hunting and gamebird hunting, this is the very best South African duck hunting combo package available. Plains game upgrade available!

"Just got back from South Africa waterfowl collectors hunt and had a spectacular time. Staff are awesome. Every spot-and-stalk was dead on. Was like 15 mini safaris. Was able to collect the 15 waterfowl species I was chasing in 3 1/2 days. Everything ran like a well-oiled machine. putting this wonderful trip together for me!!" - Rich Maris

"The lodging, the food, the guides/PHs, the people and the culture were exceptional. Ramsey has done an amazing job of inserting variety into this South Africa bird hunting trip and no 2 days are the same. I'm a better, more educated hunter as I return home. Truly life changing. I can't wait to come back again!" - Austin Collins

GETDUCKS CONSERVATION CORNER

Modern wildlife conservation can no longer only consider the observable, but also the unseen.

At the fundamental level, wildlife management is conservation of genetic variability as the variation that we describe as bio diversity was born out of millennia of selective processes at the molecular level. Dr. Philip Lavretsky's team at the University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP) makes sure that waterfowl conservation remains at the forefront of wildlife conservation. Running a wildlife genetics lab, Dr. Lavretsky provides unparalleled innovative solutions for the management and conservation of worldwide waterfowl populations. With a lab motto of Field2Gene, Dr. Lavretsky's team works across landscapes to ask questions surrounding issues of hybridization, understanding habitat use, as well as movement and migratory tendencies, etc., but they do so with a solid foundation of knowing the exact genetic makeup of the individuals being used to ask those questions.

GetDucks.com's Ramsey Russell partnered with Dr. Lavretsky to conduct fieldwork on wild yellow-billed and African black ducks from South Africa. Not only did they get the first-ever genomic understanding of these species, but they are using this information to build informative field keys to distinguish between age-sex age cohorts of these species. Thanks, in part, to Safari Club International, they collaborated again to collect vital waterfowl genetic data in Australia before anti-hunters permanently closing waterfowl hunting there. In North America, Dr. Lavretsky continues to help us understand population dynamics of our beloved waterfowl species worldwide, with major focus on improving wild mallard conservation. More recently, Lavretsky's research team has turned to AI-driven software development of application to direct management decisions.

A new partnership between Dr. Lavretsky and Ducks Unlimited. Coined as duckDNA, it's the largest citizen-scientist project attempted to date within waterfowl science. All North American duck hunters are being enlisted! If you're interested in participating and becoming a hunter-scientist like Ramsey Russell, sign up at www.duckDNA.com. Waterfowl hunters have always been among the most dedicated conservationists, and this is the latest opportunity to make sure we stay exemplary in wildlife conservation.

Mazatlan Duck Hunting

"Obregon Mexico Duck Hunting Combo – Easy travel. Good hunting. Lots of ducks. Great camaraderie, weather, good number of birds, staff at the lodge is good. The lodge is dated, it's comfortable and the service and value are good. This was my 2nd trip and I will do it again. Ramsey and Anita They make the trips easy." - David W. Owen

"Mazatlan Mexico Duck Hunt was outstanding in every way – Accommodations, guides, duck hunting. Seeing so many ducks in one place, something I will never forget." - Jerry Maness

Obregon Mexico Duck Hunt Combo combines the best of trophy Mexico wingshooting. All-inclusive hunting packages include ducks, black brant, white-winged dove, quail, and trophy bass fishing. Guests are lodged in exclusive 9-bedroom lodge with open bar and superior guest services. Excellent meals of delicious beef, fresh seafood, wild game, and Mexican specialties are served by attentive waitstaff. This top-seller books out early each year! January through February is primetime. Duck-dove combos November-December. White-winged doves September-October.

GetDucks.com Obregon

Mexico White-Winged Dove Hunt proves once and for all that the good old days are NOW! Much closer than Argentina, most guests are drinking frosty cervezas by 3 PM, not boarding a plane for an overnight flight. Shooting volume amounts to 15-20 boxes per hunt, and shooters soon learn that mourning doves and eared doves are little white-winged dove wannabes. Perfect for groups of friends or family, corporate outings or entertaining important clients, this ALL-INCLUSIVE package offers tremendous value, includes everything but ammo and a few discretionary extras. September to early November.

Baja Pacific Black Brant Hunt is popular among avid waterfowl collectors or hunters looking to expand their wingshooting horizons. Pacific Black Brant migrate from the Gulf of Alaska and western Russia to Baja Mexico's San Quintin Bay each year, where an estimated 40% of the entire world population overwinters. Locally-available seafood consists of shrimp, clams, oysters, and crabs. Inclusive package. Limited weekends January – February.

Sonora Lodge Mexico Duck & Dove Combo is a NEW all-inclusive package developed by popular demand. Morning ducks, mid-day siesta, and afternoon doves. World-class shooting, convenient drives. Well-appointed, 5-bedroom lodge reserved exclusively for groups of 4-7 hunters. Late-December to early-March.

"I can't say enough good things about Obregon Mexico Duck Hunting Combo. From the bird boys all the way to the outfitter himself, everyone made every moment super enjoyable, whether it was hunting or non-hunting!" - Dustin Kuehn

"The hunting was great and this Mazatlan Mexico duck hunting outfitter exceeded expectations! Fast-paced action, sheer number of ducks in the area was impressive. My first time duck hunting in Mazatlan, I feel we had very productive hunts all three mornings. This trip was also a vacation for my wife and I, it was a great feeling knowing we could leave the booking and trip details up to the professionals at GetDucks.com." - Mason Tabler

"Great hunting, wonderful lodge and fantastic staff. The entire Mexico duck and dove hunting experience was wonderful. Everything was top notch. I can't think of anything that could have made it any better." - Tommy Chapman

It's Always Duck Season Somewhere

Ramsey Russell pursues waterfowl to the ends of the earth

BY OLIVER HARTNER

Many waterfowlers limit their hunting excursions to places within driving distance of their home. A smaller cohort chases the migration within the borders of North America. But an elite few travel beyond continental boundaries, and if they have hunted ducks in corners of the globe barely discernible on a map, there is a high probability they were in the company of Ramsey Russell.

Since 2003, Russell has built an adventurous life around his passion for waterfowling with the phrase "It's duck season somewhere" as his guiding mantra.

Before gallivanting around the globe in search of ducks and geese, Russell grew up in Greenville, Miss., a part of the state's Delta region known for its waterfowling opportunities. He didn't find his way to hunting until his early 20s, but he read stories about hunts in other parts of the country that seemed exotic to him.

"When I was in high school sitting in study hall — some called it detention — I'd read books and magazines about hunting snow geese in Texas. Reading those stories inspired me, and when I had a little money in my pocket after getting to graduate school, I went to Texas on a goose hunt and thought it was amazing. That's what planted the travel bug," Russell says.

He finished his postgraduate education at Mississippi State University and took a job as a forester with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which provided him with enough disposable income to expand his hunting horizons.

Russell booked a duck hunt in Canada, but he quickly realized it wasn't a first-class trip when the guide showed up hungover and more than an hour late. His disappointment in the experience inspired him to return to Canada with a plan of his own.

Instead of going through a middleman, Russell established direct contact with an outfitter in Alberta. He invited three friends to go with him; the following year, 10 more joined the group. After one of the hunts, he was pulled aside by the outfitter and asked > to become a booking agent for hunting trips.

"I was just a hunter who wanted to hunt," Russell recalls. "I asked him, 'What the heck is a booking agent?' and he said, 'Well, you book hunts and bring clients, and I pay you a commission. It's essentially what you're doing right now except you're not getting paid to do it.'"

"I was a federal employee with a budding career and wasn't necessarily interested in a side hustle, but he made a compelling case," Russell says.

He began building his side business by joining several duck hunting forums and posting about his hunts. He also created the first iteration of Getducks.com. Russell kept booking hunts in western Canada, then learned how to expand his offerings after a canceled trip to South America.

"I booked an Argentina hunt through a taxidermist down there to try it out, and it was great," Russell recalls. "The following year, I couldn't get in contact with him when my friends wanted to go. So, I called the outfitter directly, and when he told me that many of these booking agents were fly-by-night, I saw a business opportunity to do things better."

Russell used every hour of his annual leave that summer to build out his book for hunts in Argentina, Uruguay and Peru in South America. One of the outfitters he still uses in Argentina asked to meet with him after his hunt, and from this meeting, a unique business opportunity was presented.

The owner of that outfitter brought a notebook with him. He said, "We've worked with clients from France, Italy and other parts of Europe. But I want you to tell me precisely how American hunters want things to go," Russell recalls.

In essence, what he told him was, "We want the ducks to present themselves, and this requires certain techniques and practices they didn't know how to execute."

Through this hybrid booking-consulting model, Russell provided more value to the outfitters. As a result, Get Ducks grew more profitable, and the hunts became more exotic. In 2008, he considered leaving federal service to pursue his passion as a full-time career.

"My father-in-law was a CPA and my brother-in-law was a banker, and they told me the numbers looked good," Russell says. "Then I called in a favor and got among the big boys at Dallas Safari Club ... (who) saw I was offering something unique."

The following week, he walked into the office and declared, "I have seen the future, and this ain't it."

"I ended my career in federal service, put all my chips on the table, and I haven't looked back," he says.

In the ensuing 15 years, Get Ducks has grown to offer domestic and international hunts, with Russell logging between 150 and 200 days of travel annually — with some years climbing as high as 300 days on the road.

He chases the migration from Canada to Mexico throughout the fall and winter, then changes hemispheres and hunts south of the equator during the Northern Hemisphere's spring and summer.

Within a given year, his hunts may take him from the edge of the Arctic Circle to the southern islands of New Zealand. Getting to many of these foreign and remote > places under normal circumstances can be challenging, but when you add the logistics of waterfowling to the mix, it takes a practiced guide to keep things running smoothly.

Russell recounts a trip to Mongolia when he and a client were sequestered at the airport in Beijing.

"I presented the paperwork for our firearms to airport security, but they didn't process them correctly, having never seen such a thing before. They pulled us off into a room and there were a bunch of police, and everyone was yelling at each other."

Fortunately, Russell had stashed copies of the documents in each piece of luggage. This allowed him to produce the papers again so their translator could sort things out with law enforcement. Almost 12 hours later, they were able to continue their journey.

"Traveling to these places can be very daunting, and you've got to be able to roll with the punches and be prepared for anything," he says.

Sam VanHook, who met Russell when both were with U.S. Fish and Wildlife, has accompanied him on several of his adventures. They've hunted in Argentina, Mexico, Canada and the Netherlands.

"When I hunt in a foreign country, I want the hosts to be legitimate and safety minded, and Ramsey ensures that," VanHook says. "You know when you're hunting with him that everything is going to turn out right, even if there's a complication."

Ian Munn was one of Russell's professors during his graduate studies, and they've since hunted together in South Africa, Russia, Canada, Mexico, Argentina and Uruguay. Munn says Russell and his wife, Anita, "have an incredible eye for detail, and it's comforting to know that they're supporting you on these trips if something goes wrong."

One of the reasons Russell started on this journey was to live life to the fullest and to hunt game in places where he could be transported — if only for a little while — to a time before mankind made its mark upon this planet. "And that's getting more difficult to find in the year 2023," he says.

"Ducks were around a long time before we were, and I want to find them living as they did before our species was here," he says. "Before agriculture. Before civilization."

During his quests to find these places, Russell has seen evidence that humanity and the natural world are on a collision course that threatens both our species and the wildlife making their home in the habitat.

"Our connection with nature has been severed, making it hard to see the damage we're doing to the ducks if you're not a hunter or get outdoors very much," he says. "Conservation organizations like Ducks Unlimited and Delta Waterfowl are holding what I like to call the 'thin green line,' but that line is thinning out."

Russell uses his podcast, Duck Season Somewhere, to discuss these matters and document waterfowling culture. "I hate to be the bearer of bad news, but at this rate, waterfowling won't be around in 20 to 30 years if we don't do better," he says.

Russell values the unique cultural experiences of the places he hunts as much or more than the game he harvests.

"So much of what I love about going to these places has nothing whatsoever to do with pulling the trigger. I love getting off the beaten path and completely immersing myself in the culture. My life is like walking through the pages of an old school National Geographic magazine, but instead of a camera, I'm packing a shotgun and waders," he says.

Without the aid of a translator, Russell often spends several days hunting and staying among rural native tribes of people who lack plumbing or electricity. Still, he insists the language barrier rarely presents a problem because of the common love for waterfowling.

"When we're out there together for hours at a time, we might not speak the same tongue, but we share the common language of duck hunting. And that makes up for a lot of the things that might get lost in translation," he says. ■

TESTIMONIALS

I never could have imagined the time I would have in Argentina would exceed my expectations so much. I had the time of my life duck hunting in the remote marshlands of Argentina. Our guides and the rest of the staff hosted the most amazing experience I could asked for!! - Ashely Gonitzke

Regarding our recent La Paz Argentina duck hunt, the staff are very hospitable, the best. Hunting was superb, food delicious. La Paz is truly the crown jewel of Argentina duck hunting, pigeons and doves.

Thanks to all involved. - Mike & Josh Stephens

Many thanks for great memories I will take them to the grave. Outstanding Argentina bird hunting, food, staff and attention to detail. Only hope I can come back soon! - Terry Gruninger

Caught your Family Traditions Australia podcast episode on my drive to this morning's hunt. Quite an eye opener as to just how vulnerable this sport of ours really could be. Thank you for all that you do for the waterfowling community! - Doug Dohl

The duck hunting in Mazatlan Mexico was excellent. Area was fantastic. My non-hunting wife had a great time. I was able to harvest all of my target duck species [prime taxidermy specimens]. Communications with Ramsey and Anita were very good. - Chad Snarski

Incredible Argentina duck hunting, Ramsey! Whacked em hard and fast each morning!!!! Sign us up again for next year! Dad loved it. Said best duck hunting he's ever experienced or even heard of! Great trip! - Brent Wood

Thanks to the good folks at Getducks.com that arranged our excellent Alaska King Eider hunting trip. We have hunted ducks on four different continents, but this Alaska king eider hunt proved to be the excitement of a lifetime. - Kinsey and Mona Robinson is not a contest. It's a personal quest. Many promote an official 41 waterfowl species to include ducks, geese, and swans [and crane]. But what's the real number? Ramsey Russell's North American Waterfowl Species List includes all subspecies encountered with travel. Waterfowl migrate and many of us hunters follow, because the world is way bigger than our own backyard. For many of us the reward is the experience: New waterfowl species are simply by-products of the chase. Ramsey Russell's GetDucks.com North American Waterfowl Species List represents the most complete North American Waterfowl Slam list. But it's your quest. Adjust as necessary or desired.

GetDucks.com offers duck hunts on 6 of the world's 7 continents. Travel duck hunting is a subjective experience. There are many reasons why people travel worldwide to duck hunt. In addition to the adventure and recreational values inherent to various duck hunting destinations are the myriad of waterfowl species represented. We have for decades worked with many clients that have completed North American collections and are now collecting hunting experiences on other continents. GetDucks.com's Gamebirds of the World quickly references the growing list of duck, goose, and gamebird species available through GetDucks.com. For your convenience, it's sorted geographically.

Visit GetDucks.com for more detailed information to include full species descriptions, Ramsey's anecdotal observations, and where-to-hunt details.
